Whidden of the Presbyterian church, Carstairs, was in town on a visit to the Rev. Marshall, and was in the act of hitching up prior to departure for home, when somehow one of the tugs fell and touched one of the horses, causing both horses to bolt. The son of Mr. Whidden who was in the buggy at the time was unable to stop them and but for the check they received through colliding with a fence, which enabled Mr. Marshall to get to their heads, there might have been more serious results. As it was the buggy was badly smashed, the seat and top being wrenched off, as well as the pole being broken. Great credit is due to Mr. Marshall for getting to their heads so quickly, thus preventing a more serious accident.

Letter from Rev. J. S. Ferguson

Bardias, Ismid.

Turkey-in-Asia.

August 17th, 1909.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Our school closed for the summer vacation on June 22nd and will open on September 7th. A month of this time we spent in the ancient city of Constantinople, which is the meeting ground for east and west, the famous Christian capital that for five hundred years has been in the hands of Mahomedans. Permit me to give a brief sketch of the dethrowment of the Sultan in April last, that you may see from close range something of the struggle for progress and liberty in this crude land.

The first parliament of Turkey met in December 1908, and the air was filled with shouts of "Huriet!" (liberty) and "Long live the Constitution!" The Sultan, Abdul Hamid, perhaps more properly named Abdul the Damned, posed as a friend of this new regime, but, he, who for thirty years had proved to be a most crafty and cruel despot could scarcely be expected to be so suddenly and soundly converted. To him, when a young man, Satan had shown the glory of absolute power and the lure of its gratifications. Abdul bowed and worshipped, and for 32 years the lives and property of the sad land were made to minister unto the personal whims of this cruel tyrant. Money and fear were his two great weapons. He squeezed all the taxes possible out of the people into his own treasury, and through the power of bribery and well paid spies, and the fear of torture and death, he paralysed the land with terror. Now and then Armenians would be massacred and young Turks with progressive ideas would in the darkness of night be sunk in the Bosphorus. Through jealousy of one another the European powers stood by and closed their ears to the cries of the helpless victims in the claws of this fiendish monster. People seemed to have lost their faculty of hope, when suddenly through the thick darkness of despair there burst forth the dawn of a better day. There are always some men who cannot be bought by gold or terrified by fear, the love of liberty and progress is deep and eternal, and can always be found in some human breast. Soon we see the whole Salonica army under Enver Bey ready to march upon Constantinople unless the Sultan agrees to Constitutional government. The terrified Sultan grants all requests and throws all blame for the misdeeds of past years upon his ministers. This was in July 1908, and in December the first parliament met. Abdul smiled graciously and bided his time. In April of this year signs of coming trouble were evident. The Young Turk party had of course been making many errors in their inexperienced attempts at reform. The great mass of the Turks are grossly ignorant and very orthodox Mahomedans. Any liberal ideas of the Young Turks were looked upon with grave suspicion by these natural-born religious fanatics. A few popular and prominent men who had been criticizing publicly this progressive party were shot in the street. This high handed act was blamed upon the Young Turk party. The time for the Sultan to act had now come. With his old time craft he played his game. Stealthily he was buying over the soldiers to his side and sending well paid sofas (Mahomedan priests) amongst the soldiers and populace to kindle their fanaticism against the Young Turks. One evening the soldiers bound their officers that still remained faithful, and they accompanied by sofas, flocked in large numbers to a mosque. Soon companies of soldiers paraded the streets following volley after volley and filling the air with shouts of "Long live the Sheriat," (the sacred law) and

"Long live the Constitution!"—a well planned cry to win the people and to hide the treacherous hand of Abdul Hamid. The printing office of the Young Turks was destroyed, their meeting places pelted with bullets and a few of their leaders shot, although most of them escaped in various disguises. The Armenians, foreigners, and reformers generally, were filled with dread as they saw the old regime coming again into power, but all was not yet lost, Enver Bey hurried from Germany to Salonica. In a few days the Salonica Army are gathered on the outskirts of Constantinople. With fine skill they surround the city and closed in upon it. Masses of wild Kurds, who at the instigation of the Sultan have gathered for massacre and plunder are shot down like dogs. Nearer and nearer the army fights its way towards the palace. Many of the Sultan's soldiers desert him and yield up their arms, but still he does not surrender. His water and gas supplies are cut off. The war vessels stand ready to throw shells upon the palace from the Bosphorus. The last barracks is now being attacked. After a hot short fight a flag of surrender is hoisted from the barracks, and Enver Bey's soldiers march up to take possession; when suddenly these treacherous villains open fire, but it is all in vain; for soon they are overpowered and those guilty of such treachery are marshalled out to dig their own graves. They are made to stand in line with their backs to the ditch, a volley from good marksmen and their bodies fall into their dishonoured grave. Look now to the palace and you see at last that the Sultan's flag of surrender is flying in the air. A few leaders with a guard make their way to the palace and find him in a small out of the way chamber. By night, he, with ten of his harem, are taken to Salonica. The thousand palace ladies and servants are disposed of in many ways. The Jewish wives fades away before the luxurious oriental splendor of Abdul Hamid, the last cruel despot we hope the East shall ever know.

The final act in this Sultan's despot career was the ordering of the ordering of the massacres in Adana province where 25,000 Armenians were slain and their property plundered or destroyed. Lawson Chambers, who once visited me in Didsbury was an eye witness of this horror. What Mahomedans did here in the name of Allah, so did the Israelites in early times in the name of Jehovah; e. g. read 11th chapter of Joshua. Had the Salonica army been one day later a massacre would have taken place of Christians and Foreigners all over the land. Our village of 9000 inhabitants was filled with fear. It is sixty miles from Constantinople and seven miles from Nicomedia, the capital of the Province. On the hills around are Mahomedan villages. Ten years ago a massacre of this village had been planned but through the influence of British Subjects here and the British Ambassador it was prevented. We are British subjects at this American school, have therefore, Britain and United States behind us. But what of these ill fated Armenians, without Arms and down-trodden for centuries, and no great Power to take up their cause? Jealousy, or fear or self interest seems to have deafened the ears of Europe and America, so that they cannot hear the helpless cry of this perishing humanity. Yet England builds her dreadnoughts and the colonies, with much pomp, offer their ships of war, and two Christian nations crush their own people with taxes, for the sake of national pride, and like the Pharisees of old see their brother perishing by the way, and pass by on the other side.

Yours sincerely,
J. S. FERGUSON.

A sad accident occurred about five miles west of here. Mr. G. Nichol's nephew, just over from the States, for his health was driving one of Mr. Nichol's teams on the mower, when the team took fright and ran away, throwing the young man over in front of the cutting bar. In some way a bolt got into the knives causing the pitman and while trees to break thus releasing the team, otherwise the accident would have surely been fatal, as it was one leg was very badly cut and torn with the guards. He was taken to Trochu to the Sisters of Mercy Hospital where he received every attention. Dr. Milne is in charge, which is lucky for the young man.—Bowden News.

"Now you'll listen to me for a moment," said Bennett, silencing the interruption. "You say I'm in love with Miss Wainwright. It is true. I love her in a way a dog like you could never understand if he tried for a lifetime. I'd give my life for one word on her from her, but I'd sooner go forever without that word than win it by a dishonest deed that would prove me unworthy of her. I asked her love as a free gift and tried to deserve it. She refused, and I won't try to buy what she won't give me, especially since the price would make me as unworthy of her as you yourself are."

"But you take the wrong view of it. You see it?"

"I see this much: I'll have to speak plainer to get my view of the case into your vile mind. If ever again you meet me, stand out of my way. Don't speak to me or come near me, for if you cross my path again I'll treat you ten thousand times worse than when I thrashed you in that football game. That's all."

Bennett, restraining his wrath with a mighty effort, turned on his heel and strode off into the corridor, leaving Gibbs staring after him in dumb, impenitent despair.

When the broker had recovered himself sufficiently to start from the room, Dallas Wainwright stood before him, barring the exit. Her face was dead white, her big dark eyes ablaze.

"Wait," she commanded. "I must speak to you—for the last time."

"Dallas," gasped the desperate man, his drawn face turning positively yellow. "You were—your heart?"

"Mr. Bennett just now called you the foulest cur in all the world," said Dallas, her voice scarcely louder than a whisper, yet every syllable stinging as a whip-lash. "He put it too mildly."

"But, sweetest—"

"Dallas Wainwright, please," she said, "offer to sell me to him in exchange for his conviction. If any other brother had told me such a thing I would have believed him, but I myself heard it. And I heard his splendid answer."

"But, you know, I was joking! That it was just a trick to—"

"Just such a trick that made me promise to be your wife? Yes, but this time you had to do with a man—a man in a million—not with a poor, cretulous little idiot like me. And he answered you as I should have answered you with my eyes open in time. I—"

"Dallas," groaned Gibbs, "for heaven's sake don't look at me like that! I can't bear it! I love you! And I—"

"And I in my criminal folly promised to marry you," she stammered. "I let you kiss me. My lips are degraded forever by that touch of yours. I let you speak words of love to me. I broke a brave man's heart for your worthless sake. Oh, the shame—the horrible shame of it all! But I won't thank God on my bended knees that I have found out the truth before it was too late."

"Too late?" he echoed in horror, his voice rising almost to a shriek.

"Dallas, you're not to go to throw me over? You aren't?"

"Scott Gibbs," she answered quietly, a world of wondering scorn in her level tones. "You do not even know how vile a thing you are. Now leave me, please. Your presence sickens me."

He tried to speak but something of the ineffable contempt in her steady eyes silenced him.

"Now leave me, please. Your presence sickens me."

Without a word he slunk out of the room and out of her life.

Phelan, aging with eagerness for the coming struggle in the aldermanic chamber, bustled past through the corridor. The alderman had many duties today, and as the performance of each brought him nearer to his longed-for revenge on Horrihan he was positively beaming with righteous bliss. Dallas caught sight of him.

"Alderman!" she called faintly.

Phelan halted, still in haste to fulfill his mission.

"Could—could I see Mr. Bennett?" she asked, a new timidity transforming her rich voice. "Do you know where he can find him?"

"Is it important? He's pretty busy."

"Very important!" she pleaded. "I must see him at once!"

"I'll look him up," agreed Phelan, "but I warn you he's too busy to see you just yet. I'll have to take you back to the question. Our bill's coming up in a few minutes now, and you don't want to miss it. Then I'll spare up his honor for you as soon as he's got a spare minute or bring you back here to him. Sorry to keep you waiting," he went on as they started toward the council chamber, "but before this session's over all sorts of things is due to explode, and we ain't to hold you on."

"I think that is," retorted Bennett, wheeling about on the dais. "And even if I can't nail the Roberts bribery on you I've plenty more counts to hold you on."

"All these generalities and vague accusations prove nothing, Bennett," answered Wainwright, drawing courage from Horrihan's colossal calm and speaking with more assurance. "Mr. Horrihan and I are not schoolboys to be scared by baseless threats. This is all guesswork on your part. Come, now, name one specific charge you can prove."

"One will be enough to convince you," asked Alvey. "Well, then, how about this as a first guess? Mr. Horrihan's tribe of $200,000 in money and 25,000 shares of borough stock for getting to put through the Horrihan franchise? For guesswork that doesn't seem to me very bad."

Wainwright's hard mask of a face twitched convulsively, but the steady brain that had carried him unshaken through a thousand risky financial deals came out of its recesses. "An excellent guess, but he agreed in splendidly forged amusement, 'but unfortunately the courts demand proof before convicting any man, and there is no proof whatever of it.'"

"Are you sure?" queried Bennett. Turning to Phelan, he asked:

"Please ask Mr. Thompson to come."

The alderman, with an expansive grin, flung open the door of the farther room.

At sound of his secretary's name Wainwright had sprung to his feet and, dumfounded, was leaning heavily on the table, staring across the threshold of the suddenly opened door.

There, framed in the dark doorway, his face deathly pale, his eyes glowing with a strange light as of unnumbered Cynthia's brother.

His presence in the city hall was no mere chance, but the climax of a series of conferences between Bennett, Phelan and himself, dating from the night of the administration talk, when, deluding his secretary, the secretary's hand had been forced by the impatient alderman and his identity revealed.

"Robert" Outwitted.

Speaking at the Newtonian Reform Club recently, Mr. William Lawson, M.P., told an amusing story of the children's Act. At 10 o'clock a man entered a public house, leaving his wife outside with a baby in her arms. A constable approached and informed her that she was not to be inside the house. "Whereupon the woman replied, 'It is only four months old; feel the weight of it.' The policeman took the child in his arms, and the woman slipped into the public house, and 'Robert' as guardian of the child."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson XII.—Third Quarter,
For Sept. 19, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, a Comprehensive Quarterly Review, Golden Text, Acts xii, 20—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

LESSON I.—The second missionary journey—Antioch to Philippi—Acts xvi, 6-15. Golden Text, Acts xvi, 9. "Come over into Macedonia and help us." The lessons of this quarter cover Paul's second and third missionary tours and illustrate the things that even to this day may befall the Spirit filled and Spirit sent servants of the Lord. Souls will be saved, companies of believers gathered, but there must be faithful and persistent seed sowing, patient waiting and absolute surrender to the Spirit's control and guidance.

LESSON II.—The Philippian Jailor, Acts xvi, 25-40. Golden Text, Acts xvi, 31. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and ye shall be saved and your house." A most unlikely convert, at most unlikely time, in a most unlikely place, but thus God works, not as we would think or expect, but as He sees best, asking us to be willing to suffer with and for Him, who bore so much for us, and praise Him through it all. It is His power that saves, and we are saved by His power and believing in Him.

LESSON III.—Paul at Thessalonica and Berea, Acts xv, 1-15. Golden Text, Acts xv, 22-24. Golden Text, John iv, 24. "God is Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in Spirit and in Truth." The great adversary is the world, the flesh and the devil, and we are to worship any kind of a god and use any gods as they please if he can only keep them from knowing the one true God, the only Redeemer and Judge of all mankind.

LESSON IV.—Close of Paul's second missionary journey, Acts xvi, 122. Golden Text, Acts xviii, 32. "The world is full of trouble, but the world is full of good cheer; I have overcome the world." God always has a "He not afraid" over every one who is faithful, whether it be Abraham or Ishmael or Paul or you, dear reader, whoever you are, if only you are a child of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

LESSON V.—Paul's instructions to the Thessalonians, I Thess. v, 12-24. Golden Text, I Thess. v, 15. "See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever, if any man will do good, let him follow me." In this probable first letter which he wrote we have a fair sample of all his instructions. Saved by the Lord Jesus, he was to be a good man, to serve Him and to wait for His Son from heaven, walking worthy of God while we wait for His kingdom.

LESSON VI.—Paul's instructions to the Thessalonians, II Thess. v, 1-24. Golden Text, Acts xviii, 17. "The name of the Lord Jesus was magnified." This is a story of Paul's years at Ephesus when through Him all who dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, and to make manifest the pre-eminence of that name over the evil one and all evil spirits God caused special miracles to be wrought through Paul.

LESSON VII.—The riot at Ephesus, Acts xix, 23-41. Golden Text, I Cor. xii, 9. "He said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness." When the name of the Lord Jesus is magnified and the word of God grows and prevails the adversary will surely show his wrath; hence this letter in the name of Diana of the Ephesians whom all Asia and the world worshipped.

LESSON VIII.—Paul on Christian love, I Cor. xiii, 1-13. Golden Text, I Cor. xiii, 13. "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three, but the greatest of these is love." Consider how much that is outwardly good and praised by men may be in the sight of God as nothing. "That which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." (Golden Text, I Cor. xiii, 15.) The love of God, which is the greatest thing we ever heard of, must be known and believed and the Son of God received, and His service can be acceptable to Him.

LESSON XVII.—Close of Paul's third missionary journey, Acts xxi, 1-17. Golden Text, Acts xxi, 14. "The will of the Lord be done." Service at Tyre, Ptolemais and Caesarea mark the close of this third great journey in the name of the Lord Jesus, but the special thing to be noted seems to be his being forewarned by the Holy Spirit to come to Jerusalem (21, 24), and yet his determination to go, thinking, no doubt, that it was simply the kindness of the brethren and their desire that he should not suffer unnecessarily.

ROAD NORTH THIS SEASON

The Great Waterways Road Has Been

Financed and will be Started Soon

Edmonton—In the arrival in the city of Wm. R. Clarke, of Kansas City, financial manager of the Great Waterways railway, accompanied by E. A. James, general manager; Dr. J. L. Waddell, chief engineer; and G. D. Minty, of Winnipeg, solicitor for the company, the city of Edmonton can look forward into the indistinctly far distant future to seeing an independent railroad extending as far as Fort McMurray, and having the southern terminal in Edmonton.

It is Mr. Clarke's second visit to this city. He is here on the occasion of the sitting of the legislature last winter, when he secured the charter and guaranteed the construction of the railway from Edmonton to tap the wonderful resources of the north.

He has been then he has been engaged in the monumental task of planning the construction of 400 miles of railway, and he has been busy building many times on paper, but Mr. Clarke said he has now got his organization into the form of a corporation, and he is now ready to go ahead with the actual construction of the road this year.

Toronto, Ont.—A delegation of fire insurance men from the three municipalities who are convinced that a vigorous campaign against some of the clauses of the new insurance act, particularly those relating to the independent companies to operate, were in Toronto conferring with the members of the Ontario Fire Insurance association.

Their campaign, which they declare is primarily in the interests of the shareholders of Canadian insurance companies, has met with the approval of the Ontario Fire Insurance association, and the delegates propose to carry it further. They left for Winnipeg, where they will meet the Manitoba insurance agents, and intend then going through to the coast.

Mr. Winston Churchill's Mother

It is so much difference between her and her mother, both are equally eager for popular applause, both equally doubtful whether they will get it. Thus Mrs. Churchill-West, in "His Borrowed Plumes," the production of which she is making a most interesting study in the Hicks Theatre, London, a few days ago. One wonders what Mr. Winston Churchill's mother would have said to the first performance from a box, thought of this, his mother's sarcastic reference to "his mother's mother" in "His Borrowed Plumes" is Mrs. Cornwallis-West's first play, and was written in a single sitting. It is a comedy, and is especially brilliant in the former Lady Randolph Churchill is a woman who both wrote and speak brilliantly.

Hunters Have Narrow Escape

Narrowly escaping an awful death by drowning, losing all their guns, provisions and bedding, then hovering over the brink of starvation was the experience of the three young men, Messrs. Harold and Henry Stuart and A. G. Wilson, of this city who attempted to run the Blue Mt. rapids on the head waters of the Saskatchewan last Friday morning on the return from the fortnight's hunting trip.

The party left here August 27th for Lacombe where the trip was made overland to the river near the foothills. Here the boat was launched and the start made for this city. Owing to the low stage of the water the rapids are particularly dangerous at this time of the year and the attempt to run them proved disastrous for the young men. When in the midst of the turbulent current, the boat was swept between two huge rocks and the walls of water swamped the craft in an instant and it was only by the most strenuous exertions that the occupants were able to fight their way through the torrent lying clinging to the overturned boat.

Down stream the boat was righted and by good fortune the axe had been strapped to the side of it thus providing a means of securing firewood. A box of matches had been wrapped in an oil-cloth covering and these were found floating on the surface some distance below the scene of the accident. Everything else was lost. Some of their clothing with valuable guns, camera, bedding and the vitally important provisions disappeared in a twinkling and the condition of the travellers was serious. With the aid of the matches the wet clothing was dried and the chill driven from the bodies, but the question of existence resolved itself in scouring the unyielding woods for a bare sustenance for three days, when they arrived at the camp of Chas. Copley many miles up the river.

The hunters returned Tuesday night exhausted from the trying experience and were accompanied by the faithful dog that even when in the clutch of the rapids did not desert them to swim to shore and safety.—Strathcona Plain-dealer.

Double Duplex Grates

Sask-Alta Steel Range

For sale by W. G. LIESEMER, Didsbury, Alberta.

McClary's Fuel-Saving Scheme

Sask-Alta Double Duplex Grates will save you fuel.

Grates are separate, as shown in illustration. This allows ashes to be removed from one end of fire-box without disturbing fire in other end.

And saves fuel—as frequently there are more ashes in one end of fire-box than in other. When ordinary long grates are used good coal in one end of fire-box is shaken down with ashes in other.

Remember this feature is patented. Therefore Double Duplex Grates are to be found only on Sask-Alta Steel Ranges.

THE ONLY WAY TO GOOD HEALTH

Is to Keep the Blood Rich, Red and Pure by Using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The only way for every girl and woman to be well and at her best is to keep her blood rich and red and pure. Impure, weak blood is the cause of the wretched feeling of languor and faintness, pains in the back and sides, headaches and all those other indescribable sufferings which make the lives of so many growing girls and women a daily torture. There is one sure way to be well, and that is through the tonic treatment supplied by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These Pills actually make the new, rich blood which growing girls and women need to make them well and keep them well. Thousands of mothers and their daughters have found an effective cure for anaemia, general weakness, indigestion, palpitation, nervous disorders, troubles and other ailments in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. J. C. Moses, Brenton, N.S., says: "Last winter my daughter's health gave out. She had no energy, was very pale and nervous, and she could not do her school work. As the usual remedies given in such cases did not help her, we became much alarmed, and one day a neighbor began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. We could soon see an improvement, and as she continued to take the Pills she gained in weight and vigor; her color returned and her whole system seemed to be built up again. She is now the picture of health and joy in recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills are sold in all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A sober resident in a small village on the east coast occasioned quite a commotion by saying that the bodies of three children had just been washed ashore. The citizens were vigilant when, after much inquiry, the sober resident said:

A timber merchant was sitting in his office one day musing sadly over the general depression in the wood trade, when a quick-looking young man entered.
"Do you sell beehives?" asked the stranger.

"Yes, sir," replied the merchant, rising with alacrity and hoping to direct to look a large order. "We can supply any quantity on the shortest notice, either in the leg or in the oval."
"Oh, I don't want such as that," said the youth, shifting his feet uneasily. "I just want a bit for a kiddie bridge."

In the cases of infant mortality cholera morbus figures frequently, and it may be said that complaints of the bowels are great destroyers of child life. If all mothers would avail themselves of so effective a remedy as J. B. Keogh's Dysentery Pills, many a little one could be saved. This Cordial can be given with safety to the smallest child, as there is no irritating substance in it.

PAIGNTON'S BIG PUDDING.

Dorchester Town Revives Old Charm

able Custom—Dorchester, Mass.

The time passed at Paignton in Dorchester this month reviveth a curious historical festival. Centuries ago it was the custom here to make a huge pudding for distribution among the poor. In later years, however, it was only made on one occasion of some important event. On the conclusion of the Continental War, which ended Waterloo, for instance, a pudding weighing a ton and a half was made and boiled in sections. It cost £22 10s., and among the ingredients were 573 pounds of flour, 191 pounds of bread, 393 pounds of raisins, 191 pounds of currants, 393 pounds of sugar, 320 lemons, 300 quarts of milk, 144 nutmegs, 35 pounds of sugar, and a large number of eggs.

In 1850 Paignton again distinguished itself by making a Christmas pudding of similar weight, but since then those responsible have been satisfied with comparatively diminutive puddings, averaging about 30 pounds each.

The latter, however, were merely made for church bazaars and festivals, and did not really constitute the famous Paignton pudding, which is made only once every five years. This year is the fiftieth anniversary of the occupation of the town by the British, and in honor of the opening of the railway.

A somewhat similar custom is observed at Denby Dale, near Huddersfield, where for over a hundred years the inhabitants have baked a pudding of similar weight, but since then those responsible have been satisfied with comparatively diminutive puddings, averaging about 30 pounds each.

Fall Skin Diseases

An Article for Mothers.

When the children "break out" with eruptions and skin diseases, so common in the fall, don't run to useless and nauseating medicines. What is needed, it is a skin food as well as a healing balm.

Mrs. Chas. Lettore, of Prescott, North Channel, Ont., tells how Zam-Buk cured her baby. She says:—"My baby's head and face was so completely matted with scabs, the itching and irritation were fearful, and the little one's plight was so fearful that at one time we feared her ears would be eaten off."

"We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her rubbing and scratching the sores. Doctor after doctor treated her in vain, until we had five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but none of them did any permanent good."

"As a last resource we were advised to try Zam-Buk. The first box did so much good that we felt sure it was at last working in the right direction. We persevered with the treatment until we had used three boxes, and at the end of that time I am glad to say Zam-Buk effected a cure."

Mrs. Lettore, of 30 Gouge Street, Hamilton, is quite as eloquent in her praise. She says:—"Zam-Buk cured my little boy's skin disease, which was so bad that he could not mix with other children. Prior to his using Zam-Buk he was covered with eruptions, but Zam-Buk cleared this away too, and made his skin clear and healthy. I am very grateful to the preparation, and mothers throughout the land should always keep it handy."

To Men Who Live Inactive Lives.

Exercises in the open air is the best tonic for the stomach and system generally; but there are those who are compelled to follow sedentary occupations, and the inactivity tends to restrict the healthy action of the digestive organs and kidneys follows. Parmenter's Vegetable Pills regulate the stomach and liver and restore healthy action. It is wise to have a packet of the pills always on hand.

His Idea of Some Base Hits

Nick Altman, one of the real funny actors on the ball field, boarded at the same hotel with "Jiggs" Donahue last winter, and one morning at the breakfast table he had a conversation with "Jiggs."

"The backstreet cakes at this hotel remind me of a baseball game."

"How's that?" asked Donahue.

"The batter doesn't always make a hit."

STONEMASON PREMIER.

Remarkable Story of Mr. Tom Price of South Australia.

One of the most remarkable careers of modern times closed with the death of Mr. Tom Price, Premier of South Australia. Many years ago, in the humble position of stonemason, he helped to build the Parliament House; afterwards he sat in that very House as Prime Minister. He was a Welshman, born at Brynno, in Denbighshire. His father was a working builder, and he himself was taught the stonemason's trade in Liverpool. When only twelve years of age he saved a week in order to buy a second-hand coat at a pawnbroker's shop, so that he could attend the Sunday school. When he sat at the school he made fun of him because the sleeves were too long. He dealt with them summarily. "The boys," he related, "produced a bigger boy to flatten me out. I finished him." He attended the same Sunday school for many years, and eventually became superintendent. He was married "the prettiest girl in that school," and with her emigrated in 1861, on account of alarming symptoms of lung trouble, to Sydney, moving to Adelaide a few years later.

At Adelaide Tom Price helped, as a mason, to build the Parliament House, in which he sat since 1903 as Prime Minister. His success in life was due entirely to his gifts of self-reliance and perseverance. After I arrived in Adelaide, he said, I immediately got work with the leading contractor there. I was with him seven years. Soon after he left him became Clerk of Works for the Government, which was at that time erecting some big works at a place called Lillingston, close to Adelaide. I was asked by the Labor party to be a candidate for one of the big electoral districts of the State. I was returned (this was in 1893), beating the old member for the district by a vote of 1,000. Four years after that I became leader of the Parliament. Labor party. When the States of Australia federated I stood for a seat in the House of Representatives, and was elected on just a few votes after polling 25,000. In the year 1903 I challenged the Government, and lost. The Opposition carried a non-confidence motion, was sent for by the governor to form a ministry, and succeeded in doing so.

There was no pride in him. "I was Tom Price," he said, "when I went to school, was Tom Price as superintendent, I was Tom Price as stonemason, and I am Tom Price as Premier today. I have passed on to my generations in the future, the achievements of Tom Price, the Welsh stonemason, will be rightly and justly remembered as a great example of what sturdy merit may attain. But by the moral he truly points out, it should be remembered that in Tom Price's case the reward was not great riches or self-aggrandizement, but rather great opportunities for public service."

As poor as Job, he told a friend. "I have done nothing in the shape of wealth, but I have written my name on Acts of Parliaments of my country, which are itself cannot wipe away. And I have the best wife and the best sons and daughters in the world."

A Royal Fish Story.

You know that kings and queens have predecessors of English in olden times related to royal fish. Royal fish are sturgeon and whale, which are the finest of the finest of deep-sea fish. For this reason, "on account of their superior excellence," they are considered the best fish to eat ashore or caught near the coast of England it became the property of the crown. It was very interesting to those who might secure the whale or sturgeon, for they were compelled to give it up without receiving any pay. However, the King had some guard for claiming these royal fish his property, because it was his who guarded and protected the seas from pirates and robbers, and in those days there were very many of them.

The most peculiar feature of the custom of royal fish was that, while the whole of the sturgeon belonged to the King, only half of the whale did. For it was a prerogative, as it was called, of the Queen that the tail of every whale caught in the water described was her property, while the head only belonged to the King. The reason for this division, as given by the old records, was to furnish the Queen's wardrobe with the wholebone and this reason is more amusing than the custom is peculiar, for the wholebone lies entirely in the head of the whale. But there are many more strange and amusing customs recorded in England's early laws.

"Gipsy" Smith.

It is not generally known that "Gipsy" Smith, the famous evangelist who has returned to England, after a successful career in America, was not a gipsy, but such is the case, for he was born in a gipsy tent near Kippenburg, Scotland. His father was a man who made willow baskets and reamed chairs, and for years the future evangelist travelled about the country in a gipsy manner. He was little more than a boy when he became converted, and he tried to hasten on his own conversion because he believed he was standing in the way of his mother, who was younger than he, must, he thought, wait until her elder brother had become religious.

The Guilty Parrot.

Mrs. Carie Chapman, Cat, the well-known suffragist, while she hopes she gives credit to the noble being, Man, does not, on the other hand, overestimate the lords of creation. She was speaking recently of another prominent woman who is somewhat unknown in the suffrage cause.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 72, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Farm Crops For September

Although the magazine has been increased in size, its former high standard of matter has been maintained. The September issue of Farm Crops magazine is a note-worthy one. "The Marketing of Live Stock," by W. R. Ingram, is an interesting article. The writer discusses the subject from the standpoint of the packer, and claims that because of the poor quality of our cattle, prices seem low in comparison with the States, and this, together with irregular markets and small deliveries, tends to keep operating expenses of the abattoirs rather higher. In future issues the question from a farmer's standpoint will be dealt with, and discussion is invited from all parties connected with the live stock trade.

Fall cultivation is ably discussed by the editor. "How to make concrete Fence Posts" is an exhaustive article by a cement expert on that subject and is full of interest to the prairie farmer in solving the fence post question. "Improving Grain by Selection" is an able article by O. W. Johnson, telling how to build up a pure seed supply on your own farm. The Horse Box is a strong section. The breeding of common with pure bred mares is discussed. There are also articles on simple horse remedies every farmer should keep, and the care and weaning of colts.

"Establishing a Flock of Sheep" is a timely article by a well known shepherd on starting in the sheep business in the West on the ordinary grain farm. In poultry the best breeds for the farm are described.

The Women's section contains some interesting articles for the ladies, and the latest fall fashions are illustrated on the fashion page. The children's story is entitled "The Fairy Horses," by the well known children's author Louise Souvan. The magazine section is especially strong. Stewart Edward White presents one of his best lumbering tales, entitled "The Life of the Winds of Heaven." Other stories are "The Dagger of LaTouche," "The Fifth Way," and "The Worms that Turned," by Ada Cambridge.

The magazine is profusely illustrated, and from cover to cover its 68 pages are full of practical information for the farmer and his wife.
